IN MEMORIAM

Joseph R. Crowley, Associate Dean and Cameron Professor of Law passed away on December 3, 1985. Dean Crowley served on the faculty of Fordham Law School from 1957 until his death. As a professor, his principal subjects were labor law and collective bargaining. In 1982 he was appointed associate dean with responsibility for academic and faculty development.

Dean Crowley graduated from Fordham College in 1940 and from the Law School in 1948. Dean Crowley was a longtime favorite of students and was renowned for his passionate lectures on the "dignity of human labor" and the need for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes. In 1978, he was presented with the Keefe Award by the Student Bar Association for outstanding contribution to the school.

The students at Fordham Law School echo the words of Dean Feerick on Dean Crowley's death: "Joe Crowley was the heart of our law school, whose death is deeply felt by his colleagues and our students and graduates. No words can express our grief or adequately describe the monumental contributions he has made to our school".
